Art at Gudi

It is not too much to say that our ancestors have been some of the most creative of peoples. Through their art, they sought to express the highs and lows of their daily lives. From depicting Gods they worshiped to depicting musicians at a wedding ceremony, their art is an authentic reflection of their livelihood, thoughts, culture and their beings.

The art at Gudi can be classified among one of the best in India .It is the place you where you will discover that the art is always what you wanted. At Gudi you will be able to find most elegant collection of artifacts, pottery, indoor paintings, beautiful home decorative and not to forget innumerable range of ethnic clothing, ethnic jewelery. Where it is not difficult to get lost in the world of art. Gudi is where you discover Indian heritage at its finest form. You will see most wonderful hand made items like stone sculptures, terracotta, wooden handicrafts and list goes on.... Gudi is not just a shop its an artwork and that is why Gudi is called a heritage hut. Gudi located in IT capitol of India Bangalore is where all the magic happens.

And just to encourage Indian heritage there are sales with attractive discount at various parts of the year.

It is better not say much but it is difficult to say little.

A bit about us

Gudi's objective is to impart a touch of simple beauty to city life, so alienated from native roots and memories. We see beauty in simplicity, and the meaning of knowledge in art.

Our tribal and folk communities achieve a harmony of beauty, knowledge and art. Their art is an expression of centuries of living in communion with nature. Their huts, hamlets, bows and arrows, clothes, ornaments and vessels are all symbols of simple beauty, and sources of community knowledge. They are inspired by the colours and shapes of plants, trees, creepers, roots, and birds and animals. Their art brings awareness from nature and gripped by anxiety and urgency.

Gudi's aim is to provide rooted art as an alternative to city-centered art that is limited to glitziness. We also hope to help crafts communities that are rich in skills but are struggling to face the onslaught of modernity.

Gudi plans to bridge the country's tribal and folk communities. Our priority is to recognise their artistic excellence and present their art on one platform. It is Gudi's desire to make Indian tribal art and craft work accessible and affordable to city art lovers, and to use the modest margins to strengthen the crafts communities.

Also on our plans are camps, workshops and demonstrations. This gives art lovers an opportunity to watch crafts people at work, and to share knowledge and friendship.

Gudi is thus not just a place to buy and sell art objects but a centre for cultrure.
