

Sex Toy Industry In India Is Under Governmental Control

India has become a powerful state in the world. The role of women in Indian society is gradually altering and they are obtaining more knowledge of their sexuality. The issue whether Indian women are allowed to use sex toys is under hot discussions.

One's opinion on sexuality is dependent on social, religious and geographical backgrounds of people. So, it is closely associated with one's upbringing, sexual education, religious beliefs, mass media available, as well as some other secondary factors.

Thus, presently the Western world is still freer from bias when it comes to sex questions in comparison to the Eastern society. People have started to speak about love-making more openly & women have become acutely aware of their sensuality & sexual needs in the West. 20 years ago only few females were aware of their anatomy & use it to get physical satisfaction, while at present both western males and females apply the knowledge to intensify sexual sensitivity of the latter in order to bring a woman to orgasm.

Most Eastern cultures prohibit sex questions, in particular when it comes to women getting sexual satisfaction. So, the Indian government has proscribed the importing of sex toys such as vibrators to India. Nevertheless, because of the access to the Internet, education & the rights that women of India have been granted in recent decades, their views on their sensuality and sexual appeal has changed greatly and they are looking forward to experiencing sexual gratification in the bedroom.

Asian females are reluctant to be viewed any longer only as those who bear children & give satisfaction to men. With the sexual revolution the Western civilization has had and the information available now, they feel they have the right to have their sexual needs satisfied to the full.

There are different means women can use to learn more about their erogenous zones to experience physical satisfaction. One of them is through self-satisfaction which can be done manually or by means of sex toys.

Regardless of the governmental proscription on shipping sex toys to INDIA, there are some Indian companies that are involved in the sex industry & may provide everybody with everything required. Most of them have been granted the right to import sex toys observing the ban on shipping porno materials to INDIA. Sex toys that cannot be bought in a certain country are commonly pointed out on websites of sex shops. As far as vibrators go, they are available to buy in India if looked for closely.

Indian women are gradually becoming sexually informed through the Internet, mass media & peers &, therefore, demand to be treated with respect by their partners. Sex toys are meant to help women understand their sexuality, their sexual needs and, consequently, get more sexual satisfaction in their lives.
