

International Warehousing: Providing Safe, Reliable Warehousing In New Jersey

Warehousing, for your New Jersey business, is crucial. You need a safe location to store your goods, otherwise the entire foundation of your business is in jeopardy. Your customers expect you to provide a steady stream of high quality items on a regular basis, and without an efficient, secure storage facility at your disposal, there is simply no way to accomplish that. If your company doesn't have the ability, the time, or the resources to perform its own warehousing in New Jersey, you should consider calling in an outside contractor to handle those aspects of your business. Specifically, you should consider International Warehousing.

International Warehousing is a large company, with over one million square feet of warehousing space, spread across several states [including its New Jersey warehousing facility]. The company distinguishes itself from its competition by providing a full suite of amenities to accompany their basic storage services. Handing your stock over to International Warehousing's New Jersey team is like putting your inventory up in a five-star hotel, complete with room service.

International Warehousing's New Jersey warehousing facility is located conveniently close to the nearest port, meaning getting your goods to them in the first place is relatively simple. Better still, once International Warehousing has taken charge of your items, they have the expertise and the technology to handle them exactly per your specifications. If your goods are sensitive to temperature, International Warehousing's New York facility contains a temperature-controlled storage. If they're sensitive to moisture, a humidity-controlled chamber will ensure that they never become soggy for the duration of their time in storage.

New Jersey warehousing from International Warehousing also includes a number of ancillary services that make it incredibly easy to move and keep track of your goods. International Warehousing uses a computerized inventory tracking system, which makes it simple for them to provide an inventory of your stored goods, at your request. They also perform other crucial warehousing services, like order picking, cross-docking, shrink wrapping, shipping, and receiving. They'll even perform assembly tasks.

Another one of International Warehousing's great strengths, as compared to its competitors in the New York warehousing industry, is its total commitment to security. International Warehousing's New York warehousing facility, like all its facilities, is equipped with a network of security cameras that keep a watchful eye on the premises seven days a week, twenty-four hours a day. The company also employs a team of security guards who physically patrol the grounds, ensuring that no unwelcome outsiders have the opportunity to tamper with your precious merchandise.

Because of its unstinting attention to safety and security, International Warehousing has received "low-risk" rankings from many American banks, as well as from the Department of Homeland Security.

International Warehousing specializes in storing everything from fashion apparel, to electronics, to tobacco and alcohol.

International Warehousing is a provider of warehousing services, in New York and in several other American cities. For more information, visit IntlWarehousing.
